From the Chaplain

We celebrate Grandparents Day this month—a day to show appreciation for the grandparents in our lives, the work they have done and what they continue to do in helping to raise their families!

Grandparents Day is on September 10 this year. It was Marian McQuade, a homemaker from West Virginia, who wanted to help lonely seniors in nursing homes, so in 1978 she helped get Grandparents Day started. Celebrated the first Sunday after Labor Day, it is a day where the generations can get together for special events, where grandchildren can tap into the wisdom and heritage of their grandparents and where grandparents can talk about the good ol' days. One suggested activity is for grandchildren to look through the old photo albums and get their grandparents' help in dating the pictures, thus bringing old memories to life and creating new memories in the process.

We all likely have things we appreciate about our grandparents, be it Grandma's baking, Grandpa's storytelling, or the faith they passed on to us. In II Timothy 1:5 Paul credits Timothy's grandmother Lois for the faith she passed on to her daughter Eunice and to her grandson Timothy. This was an important heritage which Timothy must have been especially grateful for, as he went on to become a pastor. What heritage are we leaving for our grandchildren? Is our faith a part of that? Sharing Bible stories with our grandchildren is one way we can do that.

May God bless you, Grandparents, for what you have done for your families and for the legacy you are leaving behind!

Peter Berg, Chaplain
