Decisions—something we make every day. Do I do this—or do that?

Sometimes we make decisions quickly while other times we think long and hard over what to do. Sometimes we regret it later on, wishing we had decided differently.

We could ask, “Why doesn’t God compel us to always make the right choice?” Wouldn’t life be better if everyone automatically did the right thing? Think of it —no regrets! We would always get along with everyone. Wasn’t it risky for God to give us the freedom of choice?

God could have compelled Adam and Eve to do the right thing. He could have left out the Tree of Knowledge, but he didn’t. He let them decide for themselves and we know how that story ended.

In many ways our government compels us to make good decisions. Seat belts and speed limits help us be safer on the road. Knowing someone is keeping law and order gives us a certain sense of security. However, do we pay taxes and obey out of love for our authorities? No, we obey because we have to.

If God compelled everyone to make the right choices we would live in a safer world but we would also be living more like robots, just doing what we were programmed to do. God wanted someone to love him so he created us in his own image (Genesis 1:27). As part of that, we have the freedom of choice. There was a risk involved in God giving us that freedom but it was a risk worth taking because through that we can love God the way he designed us to.

May our decisions today reflect our love for God.
